About the Author

Ray McCollum came to the Lord in Little Rock, Arkansas, in 1971 while working in radio broadcasting. In 1975, he moved to Nashville, where he eventually started an advertising company. A friend who managed a local Christian radio station offered Ray fifteen minutes each day to teach the Bible, and the success of that program led him to start a Bible study that eventually grew into a church plant. In 1984, he sold his company and became pastor of Bethel World Outreach Center, where he ministered for sixteen years. In 2000, he resigned from the church to travel the world teaching the Bible. In 2009, Ray and his son planted Celebration Church in the Nashville area.

POWER OF GOD-GIVEN IMAGINATION: RELEASING THE POWER WITHIN YOU TO TRANSFORM THE WORLD AROUND YOU BY RAY MCCOLLUM PDF

God has already given you the power to create your own future...you just need to learn how to use it. The Power of God–Given Imagination is about awakening the dreamer within you. It demystifies the power of imagination and shows how we all instinctively use this power without realizing it. It shows how faith and prayer cannot operate without imagination. Author Ray McCollum also debunks the false notion that the power of the mind, the imagination, and dreaming takes one into New Age mysticism or the secular realm of "positive thinking." The power of the human mind belongs to the church, and God expects us to use it. Within the pages of this book, you will discover exactly what this power is, how it works, and how you can use it to both transform your personal life and transform the culture around you by releasing the kingdom of God.

Understanding The Power Of God-Given Imagination

By VicG

Ray McCollum in his new book, "The Power Of God-Given Imagination" published by Whitaker House brings us Releasing the Power Within You to Transform the World Around You.

From the back cover: God has already given you the power to create your own future...you just need to learn how to use it.

The Power of God–Given Imagination is about awakening the dreamer within you. It demystifies the power of imagination and shows how we all instinctively use this power without realizing it. It shows how faith and prayer cannot operate without imagination.

Author Ray McCollum also debunks the false notion that the power of the mind, the imagination, and dreaming takes one into New Age mysticism or the secular realm of “positive thinking.” The power of the human mind belongs to the church, and God expects us to use it.

Within the pages of this book, you will discover exactly what this power is, how it works, and how you can use it to both transform your personal life and transform the culture around you by releasing the kingdom of God.

Someone sees the potential in you, sits down with you and tells you the truth that you can do such and so a thing: writing books, starting a company, flying planes. At the time that you are told that you can do this activity you are not however you believe this person is telling you the truth. Now the imagination in your mind kicks into high gear and you imagine the books or the company or whatever and then it happens. It started out with the truth that you could do a thing, you believed that truth, then you imagined what it would be like doing that thing and then, lo and behold, it winds up you doing it all because you imagined it. It is the same way with The Father. He has told us The Truth in His Word. All it takes is us to believe what He is telling us and then use our God-given imagination to make what He has said happen. That is the whole purpose of the book– to help us see what The Father has been telling us, believe what we have been told and then use this new foundation to accomplish what we have been gifted to do to change the world around us. I recommend it highly! I recommend it as a gift for friends and family so that they can find their purpose as well.

Mixed messages on creating a new world around us

By Joan N.

We have been created with a basic instinct to imagine, McCollum writes. We envision a better world. While not everyone can change a nation, we can change the world around us he says. This book is about discovering the power within to dream, to imagine, and to change the world around us.

McCollum helps readers discover what that power is. Based on Gen. 11:6 he writes, “God Himself says that there is enough power in our human imagination to make all things possible.” (33) We create the reality in our mind first (first creation), then in the physical world (second creation). He notes that there will be real problems during the process and that we must maintain hope.

He ends his book with seven practical disciplines to activate God-given imagination. They include taking an honest look at your life, learning to practice the presence of God, get in touch with your true identity in Christ, and four more. These are disciplines that will definitely take some time to cultivate.

I felt that there were some mixed messages in this book. “The circumstances that you see around you have been created by the images within yourself,” he writes. (38) But then he has “the presupposition that life is difficult because we are living in a sinful world.” (56) So do we create our external circumstances or are they part of living in a sinful world?

I felt another mixed message was one about prayer. If we have ever had an answer to prayer, receiving what we prayed for, "Your prayer created the future," he says. (79) But then he goes on to write about prayer "requests." So, did my prayer create the imagined answer or did God in His sovereignty do so?

McCollum writes, "When we create things, we fulfill God's will for our lives." (50) If it were only that simple. I Thess. 4:3ff reminds us that God's will for us is much more than just creating. It involves sanctification, sexual purity, bodily discipline, and not taking advantage of another Christian.

Sometimes McCollum makes grand statements. For example, when writing about inner transformation, he says, "Transformation is no more difficult than simply looking at yourself in a mirror. But it has to be the right mirror," he adds, noting that it must be the mirror of God's Word. Ah, if it were only that easy. His statement is based on 2 Cor. 3:18 but I have read books entirely devoted to that verse and the necessity of renewing one's mind, surrendering to the work of the Holy Spirit, etc.

McCollum tells us that we can change the world around us. But he also writes, "The truth is that there certainly are things coming our way that are out of our control." (76) He writes, "Yet God invites us to be 'co-creators' of the future through prayer." (79) So do we create the future or is it under God's sovereign control?

There is some good teaching in this book. I really appreciated his writing on our self-image and how that determines our outer behavior. I also appreciated his reminding us that our motives need to be right when using our God-given imagination to create. I appreciated him reminding us that we need to pray according to God's will.

That last issue, reminding us to pray according to God's will, recognizes God's sovereign role in our "creating." I do wish there had been more emphasis on God's plan for our future and less on our own.

I received a complimentary copy of this book through The Book Club Network for the purpose of an independent and honest review.

Imagination Yielded to God

By Amazon Customer

Review Title: Imagination Yielded to God (review of The Power of God-Given Imagination by Ray McCollum)

Reviewer: Janice S. Garey

 5 Stars

The author, Ray McCollum, explains about the origination of ideas in the mind as being the "first creation." The implementation of those ideas is the "second creation." Never is a known creation without the two steps to becoming a made thing. I have never considered this before. I appreciated the author's insights to help me understand that if a person is open to hearing from God at the "first creation" level in the mind, that miracles can result based on yielding to God's ideas (aligned with His word).

Many secular books have addressed the attitude of if you can dream it then you can make it happen. The author, early on before becoming a Christian, found this type of book to be inspiring and motivating. But later he realized God was not included in those books, and that the imagining could be used for evil causes.

I am thankful for the examples given of when people align their desires and their dreams with God's word. You will want to read of the resulting miracles documented. You will feel hopeful about what God can do with and through you.

The book addresses the cessationist point of view that the Holy Spirit is no longer active with signs and wonders in this modern age. It offers scriptural references to support the author's conclusions. This discussion in the book will enlighten those unfamiliar with the doctrine and how it has affected many modern churches.

I am thankful to the author, publisher, and bookfun.org for giving me this wonderful book in exchange for an honest review. Christians worldwide need to read and act based on the information in this positive book. You, Christian, can be inspired to let God into your "first creation" process to be a part of His kingdom building plans for "on earth as it is in heaven."
